

Nancy Gerlach, who retired and moved to Mexico last year, continues her story about adapting to life in Mexico (has she un-retired? We can always hope): "It hardly seems possible that another holiday season is upon us, but it is. I've got to admit it's hard to get into the spirit without cold temperatures and some snow, but here in Mexico the weather is like Christmas in Southern California...." Story continues here . Image is the malecón and the very long pier for cruise ships at Progreso, close to Chelem where Nancy and Jeff live.
