

When I think macho, a couple things come to mind: cars, BBQ, and showing off. If you know a Man's Man, he probably loves all three. Put them together, and you've got the Holy Trinity of guy-dom.

Luckily, there's a company out there that's done just that. Hot Rod Grills is exactly what the name suggests. Dressed up as a high performance motor on an engine stand, the Hot Rod Grill gives new meaning to the term "Fire it up."

It's the only grill on the market featuring an authentic 1:1 scale for a realistic engine look, including a die-cast aluminum lid and body, two stainless steel tube burners with individual controls and a temperature gauge that looks like its part of the engine. And yes, those headers work, except the only smoke coming out of them will contain the delicious aroma of BBQ.

Grill enthusiasts and motorheads alike will flock to your front yard (because who could hide such a beautiful thing on a back porch?). Add the available spark plug corncob holders and connecting rod skewers, and you'll be the biggest, baddest dude on the block.

Click here to see more pictures of the Hot Rod Grill.