

Before you enter a Ghost Pepper food challenge, bear in mind: the heat doesn't stop with your mouth or your last bite. Almost two weeks ago, a guy in Hermosa Beach, California found that out the hard way when he took the Habanero Sam's Burrito Challenge at Amigos Tacos.

The victim, er, challenger, was a guy named John. He came in, signed the restaurant's legal waiver for the challenge, and got to munching on the burrito. It wasn't large in size, but it packed a punch of pure, concentrated evil. Not normal, James-Bond-villain-type evil, but more of a Hannibal Lector type. The sort that you know deep down is bad, but its surface charm draws you in and doesn't let up for two sequels.

Find out what happened to poor John on the Burn! Blog here . We want to hear your Ghost stories too!